

Exploring Virtual Reality with Google Tour Creator in and out of the Languages Classroom
Global C.R.E.D
2nd December 2020

@joedale

joedale@talk21.com

This session will explore how different Google tools can promote collaboration, independent learning, creativity and intercultural understanding. Attendees will have the opportunity to see how My Maps, Google Tour Creator and Google Expeditions have the power to take students on a virtual journey visiting places around the world and practising their language skills:

Session outline:

- Google Arts and Culture for promoting culture
- Google Earth Voyager to learn about places connected through an historical story
- Google Maps to practise directions and explore inside historical buildings
- Google My Maps to practise writing and speaking around points on a map
- Google Expeditions and Google Tour Creator for virtual field trips with embedded images

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the Google Arts and Culture interface. The browser's address bar shows the URL <https://artsandculture.google.com/work/art-object?id=5D918181-4000-4000-4000-4000>. The page title is "Self-portrait with grey felt hat". The main content is a large image of a self-portrait by Vincent van Gogh, depicting him wearing a grey felt hat and a blue jacket. Below the image, there is a caption: "Self-portrait with grey felt hat" and "Vincent van Gogh, Amsterdam 1887 - October 1887". To the right of the image, there is a search bar and a "View in 3D" button. Below the caption, there are several icons for sharing and saving the artwork. The page also features a "View all suggested items" button and a "View in 3D" button. The background of the page is white, and the overall layout is clean and modern.

Ideas for Using My Maps / Google Maps in the Classroom:

- In an English class, students can map Homer's Odyssey and then add thoughts, evidence from the text, and justification for whether or not the places that they mark are accurate
- Students studying a foreign language can create virtual tours of foreign countries and cities. They can add a description in the target language on each pinned location.
- Younger students in elementary school could read a story such as Hottest, Coldest, Highest, Deepest and find each location. The pins on their map could include a summary about that pinned location based on their reading in the book.
- Students in a History class can create a historical map that tracks the movements of nations during battles and wars such as the U.S. Civil War or World War II.
- At all grade levels, students engaged in reading about current events can track their select new stories, pin them geographically, and provide a summary of their understanding of each story along with a link to the original article online.

However, it seems that earlier in his reign Edward had also promised the throne to his cousin, William, who ruled the Duchy of Normandy across the English Channel. When Edward died and Harold assumed the role of king, William chose to fight for the crown. At the Battle of Hastings, which took place in October 1066, Harold was defeated. William was crowned two months later, on Christmas Day, in Westminster Abbey. Later, as an act of penance for the bloodshed caused by his conquest of England, William built Battle Abbey on the site of the Battle of Hastings in East Sussex. In this Expedition, we'll explore both the battlefield

Google Tour Creator

The Bad News First!

Tour Creator will be shut down on 30 June 2021.

Dear Tour Creator user,

The Google for Education team is committed to supporting teaching and learning from anywhere, at any time, on any device. For the past several years, we've been proud to enable immersive VR learning experiences for millions of students around the world with Tour Creator. Through Tour Creator, educators took students on new adventures to experience far-away places or learn about cultures unlike their own.

While Tour Creator has been a useful tool, usage has been limited. In order to focus on building the most impactful teaching and learning tools for schools now to support hybrid learning, we have made the difficult decision to deprecate Tour Creator on June 30, 2021. After that date, Tour Creator will no longer be accessible.

What does this mean for you?

Until 30 June 2021, you will still be able to use Tour Creator. Any tours that you publish, either unlisted or publicly, will be available at poly.google.com/creator/tours until 30 June 2021.

In the coming months, we will provide you with instructions on how you can export the assets from published tours. After 30 June, poly.google.com/creator/tours will no longer be accessible and you will not be able to create any new tours. For more information, please visit the Tour Creator Help Centre.

We have been so grateful for your partnership with Tour Creator and look forward to continuing to empower schools to bring lessons to life with new tools and features.

Thank you,
The Tour Creator Team

Google Tour Creator for English Classrooms

A couple years ago I was asked if I wanted to bring my 6th grade English class to do an augmented reality demo. I immediately jumped at the opportunity, and my students had a blast. However, during the demonstration a student came up and asked me, "Mrs. Pass, this is fun and all, but what does this have to do with English?"

For me, everything "has to do" with English. That's one of the best parts about being an English teacher! You cannot isolate it from any other discipline. All subjects rely on the skills of reading, writing, and communication; so as an English teacher it is easy to become a bridge between different subjects and even technologies.

Interdisciplinary learning is slowly gaining popularity in secondary education, but until it is common practice I will continue to patiently defend my choices for bringing my English class to an augmented reality demonstration of a volcano explosion (back in the classroom we did a questioning session, research practice, and short presentations based on what had sparked our curiosity during the AR to tie it back to our English standards).

18 example sessions on teaching languages remotely

Example sessions for remote teaching webinars created by independent languages consultant from the UK, Joe Dale

Session 1:

Online teaching: Where to start?

In this webinar, Joe Dale will demonstrate a variety of ways teachers can start online teaching. He will explore the different challenges involved and suggest ways in which teachers can teach synchronously and asynchronously using videoconferencing, interactive technologies and screencasting to promote collaboration, creativity and critical thinking.

- Give an overview of articles and resources around remote teaching highlighting the TiLT webinar series and where to save them
- Advice on security features using videoconferencing tools such as Zoom, Microsoft Teams and Google Meet
- Demonstration of some interactive tools to make your online session more pupil-centred
- Using Loom to create screencasts for creating presentations and giving video feedback.
- Use Whiteboard.fi to practice speaking and listening skills through drawing and video feedback with Screencastify
